TECH NOTE

MARINE ELECTRONICS; Onboard marine technology use has shifted in recent years from standalone devices to new multifunction systems, capable of 'talking' to the other electronic devices on your boat. The key to allowing your multifunction system to work its best for you is to keep the software current. Most manufacturers try to make the updating process simple for the end user, so downloading them from your personal computer to a blank Compact Flash or Micro SD card is simple.

Adding more user excitement is the fact that a lot of the new multi function displays have added internet and video capabilities, as well as being able to connect to your smartphone or tablet device. See below for some great examples.

TECH NOTE

ADVANCEMENTS IN FOUL WEATHER GEAR; The use of laminates are a more recent development for foul weather gear. A laminated waterproof fabric is made by spreading the coating resin onto a long roll of non absorbent paper. This means the coating thickness can be finely controlled. The paper and waterproof film is then laminated to the textile woven fabric and the paper is removed. The end result is a fabric that is lighter, whilst being just as waterproof. It is more flexible, softer and much more comfortable to wear.

Laminate fabrics are the latest technological innovation for marine apparel and point the way for lighter, more durable and comfortable garments.
